No prior experience is necessary, as the Postal Service provides paid training for all available positions, offering a wide array of opportunities. Positions vary, with starting salaries ranging from $23.47 to $38.62 per hour, culminating in an average annual pay of $72,400, complemented by full benefits.

The Postal Service's expansive operations include retail locations, mail distribution centers, and hubs. With numerous positions available, the Postal Service presents excellent and diverse employment opportunities, offering competitive pay, career growth prospects, and enduring job security.

To qualify for employment, candidates must be 18 years or older and U.S. citizens.

With nearly 1 million employees, the Postal Service presents a myriad of employment opportunities, spanning entry-level to managerial roles. Administrative, general office, and clerical positions, such as accountant, administrative assistant, auditor, bookkeeper, clerk, office assistant, secretary, staff assistant, and typist, are prevalent across various departments.

For a clearer understanding of the Postal Service Clerk role, here's a brief description:

Clerk: Clerks engage in various tasks, including selling stamps, processing incoming mail, sorting and distributing mail, and performing other clerical functions. Additionally, they assist the public with general mailing needs, such as change of address requests, mail holds, and distributing post office box keys.

Established over 200 years ago, the Postal Service operates over 30,000 post office locations, mail distribution centers, and hubs, delivering over 600 million pieces of mail annually to 142 million delivery points. Boasting a fleet of over 200,000 vehicles, the Postal Service is the world's largest and operates mostly right-hand drive vehicles for efficient mail delivery.

It's important to note that Labor Services, a private employment service, assists in gaining employment but is not affiliated with the USPS. The Postal Service, an equal opportunity employer, continues to actively hire nationwide. No experience is required, and with great pay, benefits, working conditions, career advancement, and job security, it offers a pathway to a lifelong career.
